I have a VBScript file that checks if all images in a folder are at least 5mb in size. If any of them are not, I'd like to run a command-line program that accepts the name of the file that does not pass the 5mb size test and attempts to move it to a safe folder. All the moving parts work fine, I just can't find a way to test if the target file has been successfully moved. What's the easiest way to check for the file's existence? A: There is the move method on the File class, which returns a Boolean value indicating the success of the move. You may obtain the target path with the _CurrentDrive property. Here is some example code: dim objFolder, objFile set objFolder = CreateObject("Shell.Application") set objFile = objFolder.GetFolder("c:\temp").Files("*.jpg") If objFile.move("c:\temp\OutPut Folder", "c:\temp") Then 'File was successfully moved Else
